Our Way, Our Theory of Change

By supporting behaviour change through our skilled coaches/mentors and careful programme design aligned with a holistic wellbeing philosophy, we will drive change to improve people's quality of life.

Our Impact

Our behaviour change model is epitomised by the following case study.

Meet Rob, 77. He's living with stage four prostate cancer. But every week, at The Portland Centre, he turns up to our Cancer and Rehabilitation Exercise (CARE) programme.

"(CARE) has helped me build myself back up and feel less knocked out day-to-day," Rob explained. "I genuinely have more good days than bad days since I joined."

For Rob, the programme has provided much-needed support as he manages the effects of cancer alongside arthritis and long-term medication.

"Physically, CARE helps ensure you are exercising muscles in the right way and gaining some strength back," he said. "Even everyday things like tying shoelaces or getting in and out of a car can be difficult – but I feel more confident again in my physical wellbeing."

Just as importantly, Rob highlights the sense of community within the sessions.

"It's wonderful to be working out with such a great bunch of people. Everyone understands what you've been through, and you can choose whether to talk about cancer or not. There's a real sense of positivity – we chat, laugh and genuinely have fun."

Through our CARE programme to date we have supported 274 people with 83% completing at least 9 weeks of the 12-week programme. 72% have achieved their initial goals and 73% have started a new physical activity over and above attending the CARE programme.

One month into a 12-month contract we have already achieved 50% of our target of young NEETs on our books and employment has been secured for three.

Captured youth voice during our Sport & Inclusion programmes. This has helped to build trusted relationships and generated deeper lived-experience insight to inform programme adaptation, design and delivery.

Development of our health offer has seen the successful launch of our Walk and Talk sessions. 96% report better mental health and wellbeing.
